Ironwood Manufacturing has been manufacturing school and office furniture for over 30 years. Its roots run even deeper. In 1959 Clinton Knudson, started a small wood shop making dressers and night stands. He believed in solid, sensible furniture. Edward and his brother Chuck took over operations in the early 70s and increased the business into a four man shop. Several years later the company began producing commercial furniture.

Engineering and design is the beginning of turning an idea into a completed project. Here Troy Clinton works on a design.

“Ironwood Manufacturing has been building solid, sensible furniture in the Rocky Mountain West since the ‘80s. Our heritage and location have helped to make us a sound, competitive company. Family owned, we have built our business on an honest handshake and fair dealing. Our furniture is our reputation.”

The Ironwood plant's footprint covers 68,000 square feet.

Ironwood's original business was built on providing custom built furniture for schools, offices and libraries. In 2003 Ironwood expanded its business into the ready-to-assemble (RTA) furniture market. Since then, it has improved and added to its line-up of RTA offerings, and continues the Ironwood tradition of service, with its product line built to meet or exceed industry standards.

tradition of the people in the heart of the Rockies. This same tradition shows in the production of its furniture, made with a craftsman pride, high quality, providing return on investment, and local support.

“We know you have the choice when making your purchase. We want to prove to you in every product we produce that your choice was a good choice.”

Over half of the products produced at Ironwood every year have been modified in some way to better fit the customer's needs. This collaboration keeps the company's imagination energized and provides the evolution of its products to fit the changing needs of its consumers. When buying furniture, price and quality are always a concern.

Ironwood specializes in the ready-to-assemble (RTA) furniture market, but is able to customize the design for each customer's needs.

The shop floor is kept clean and organized to make working easy and safe.

Ironwood provides several levels of quality in the products it makes. The Ironwood experience helps the customer stay in budget and meet the needs of its facility. Each project is meticulously reviewed for realistic and practical use. From concept to completed design, Ironwood works to provide the best furniture options for each individual project.
